Most abdominal CT examinations utilize iodinated contrast media (CM) and the contrast enhancement is influenced by several factors not only related to the CM but also linked to scanner technology and patients. Protocols with fixed dosing can lead to under or over-CM dosage and yield variable enhancement in patients of different weights. Therefore, personalized protocols incl. the customization of CM dose is a desirable practice to reduce the variability in interpatient attenuation.

Please join us in this interactive webinar where experts from China and the Netherlands will share their experiences in abdominal imaging.

Prof. Bin Song

Professor and Chairman, Department of Radiology,

Key Learnings

- Standard versus personalized protocols
- Tips and tricks how to optimize the contrast media and radiation dose protocols in abdominal CT
- Software use in abdominal CT

Welcome and introduction

6:00 - 6:05 PM

Prof. Bin Song

Optimizing contrast media and radiation dose protocols in abdominal imaging

6:05 - 6:35 PM

Dr. Bibi Martins and Dr. Casper Muhl

Discussion

6:35- 6:45 PM
